Emma, 38, is a radiologist from Atlanta, Georgia. She has completed medical school as well as her residency and is now relatively experienced in the field. She is familiar enough with computers to do basic tasks that relate to her work, such as work with excel and word documents. Within the RIS, she wants to be able to easily receive whatever imaging she needs, easily distinguish which patient and images are which, and be able to see the imaging clearly. She also wants to annotate the images with her thoughts and diagnosis and allow other physicians and the patient to view it.